COUNTY GOVERNMENT OF ELGEYO MARAKWET

PUBLIC PARTICIPATION POLICY GUIDELINES

2017
Foreword

Citizen dynamics in governance is largely a new area in Kenya following devolution of services that occurred in 2013. Previously citizen dynamics and engagement in governance matters was largely unstructured and was not expressly provided for in the previous constitution and legal frameworks that existed at the time. It is important to underscore that direct engagement of the citizens in all matters that concern them is critical and a good governance practice.

This policy holds that citizen dynamics and equilibrium governance is essentially about offering citizens unconditional opportunity and space to engage, contribute and influence governance matters and decisions on all matters that concern them. This phenomenon is commonly referred to as public participation.

This policy intends to put the public participation process into context through development of public participation and citizen engagement guidelines required under national and county laws. It will mainly focus on restructuring the public participation processes in the County Government of ElgeyoMarakwet.

CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

In 2013, after County Governments came into force, the Central Government required counties to pass legislation for public participation in order to release devolved funds, which led to counties passing the Public Participation Act which was flawed and could not be implemented for the past 5 years. This was further compounded by the absence of a Public Participation Policy at county level to guide the law. ElgeyoMarakwet County, one of the 47 devolved units under Kenya’s devolved system of governance, has made immense progress to actualize the devolution dream through conduct of public participation in the budgeting process at major stages in the budget making cycle. In general, there is considerable satisfaction with the current approach, however, the county considers a few gaps in its own participatory approach:

- Foremost, the county’s participatory approach is not representative of both segments of the society as well as regions. In terms of segments, the participatory approach does not facilitate participation of women, People Living with Disability (PLWDs) among such other special interest groups while in terms of regions, majority of the participants in all forums organized, are citizens residing within a distance of the forum venue – which depicts inaccessibility to forums for majority.
- Secondly, while it is clear that the forums should be representative, there is need to ensure meaningful dialogue between the government and the citizens. This means, while the participatory approach should be representative, it should facilitate smooth and meaningful deliberation to achieve quality citizen input in decision making.
- Thirdly, in order to help both citizens and policymakers achieve more of what they want from citizen engagement, participation of people should have access to information in timely fashion, and in a manner, that is accessible and easily understood.
- Lastly, to avoid fatigue, the participatory approach should ensure that the conduct of participation is coordinated across administrative units. Therefore, the conduct of participation should be harmonized across administrative units and sequenced, with clear outline on the roles played at each of the decision-making process.

1.2 Legal and Policy context

The policy guidelines seek to address challenges in the conduct of public participation within the context of the constitutional and legal provisions that make public participation mandatory. The guideline is developed in the context of the national model guidelines developed by the Ministry of Devolution and Planning (MoDP) are is geared towards strengthening the ElgeyoMarakwet County Public Participation Act 2014 or its alternative. It is also intended to strengthen provisions of public participation under the Equitable Development Act 2015. The guidelines are further applied in relation to the relevant laws, regulations and guidelines including but not limited to the following: Constitution of Kenya; County Government Act 2012; Public Finance Management Act 2012; Public Finance Management Regulations 2014.
1.2.1 Global Commitments
In 2016, the County Government applied and was successfully selected to participate in the Open Government Partnership (OGP). Among its four commitments was public participation under commitment one (1) with clear intention to address the identified issues above through development of public participation framework to provide guidelines.

1.2.2 Constitution of Kenya and other Acts of Parliament
Article 10 of the Constitution of Kenya 2010 provides for National Values and principles which amongst others promotes the full participation of the people in the management of public affairs. Further to that, further Article 91 of the County Government Act obligates the county government to establish platforms and modalities for citizen participation.

1.3 Rationale for the policy
The constitution in various chapters and clauses require that public participation be undertaken at all levels of government before government officials and body make official decisions. However, it is important to point out that public participation is essentially a new process in Kenya today. It is a complex and not so well understood concept and process. The process is often unstructured and undertaken in a tokenism way. On the other hand, there is little capacity building on the citizens to enable them to engage in the process from an informed, structured and meaningful way. Currently participation of citizens in decisions affecting them is highly limited.

1.4 Guiding Principles
- Adequate consideration and response to proposals submitted by the citizens
- Citizens are guaranteed, individual and collectively, equal rights, conditions, and opportunities to participate and have an influence on decisions adopted
- Different cultural identities are valued, respected and recognized for the construction of equality in diversity
- Information generated or owned by the Public Participation Forums shall be made public and shall be freely accessible to the public
- Participation must promote development of relations for mutual cooperation and assistance amongst county residents and institutions

1.5 The Policy Development Process
The preparation of this policy adhered to the contemporary planning process. This started with the adoption of guidelines issued by the Ministry of devolution on the preparation of public participation guidelines. Secondly, the county established a Technical Working Group (TWG) with specific terms of reference drawn from various departments and the civil society organizations tasked to prepare draft guidelines and their respective responsibilities.
The TWG reviewed the parent act in reference to the constitution and the county government act to take stock of the achievements, challenges and lessons learned from the public participation exercises carried out so far. The review also informed the TWG on the areas of focus in the preparation of the first working draft of this policy.

The TWG then held consultative meetings with practitioners of public participation, CSOs and community representatives so as to get their inputs. The inputs were incorporated in the draft policy guidelines. Finally, a validation meeting involving government and CSOs was held to validate the draft which was then submitted to the cabinet for approval.

Annex 1: Steps for conducting Community Dialogue

Step 0: Monitoring, evaluation and feedback
Participatory evaluation involves a collective reflection of achievements, identifying what went well and why particular actions did not go well. Participatory evaluation creates a learning process for the program recipients, which helps them in their efforts. After the evaluation process the necessary feedback should be provided. This promotes ownership of the process and the will to do better next time. Reinforcement is also important to motivate participants to do better or sustain the desired behaviour. This can be done for previous projects implemented by the County.

Step 1: Problem identification
The first step in conducting a community dialogue is to identify the problem or issue at hand. In this case the issue could be HIV and AIDS focusing on HIV testing and counselling (HTC), human rights or gender. It could be poor hygiene and sanitation due to lack of clean water and sanitary facilities. At this point the team will identify current problems/ issues. What the community is doing about these issues, whether the actions are giving the required outcomes and what are the constraints/ challenges faced by the community. The gaps between the preferred behaviour and current practices will determine what will be required to address the problem.

Step 2: Problem analysis
Problem analysis involves a thorough analysis of the issue/ situation at hand. Questions that can be asked under this section include:
- What are the causes of the problem/ issue at hand?
- Is the issue/ problem a shared problem in this community or is perceived as a problem for only a few?
- How is the community responding to the problem? What is the community’s current knowledge? What are current attitudes, practices and beliefs about the issue at hand?
- Has the community previously dialogued on the issue?
- Have traditional, religious and political leaders been involved in trying to address the problem/ issue at hand?

Step 3: Identification of the best options
This section shall assist the user to identify the best options. In doing this, emphasis is placed on actions to be taken to achieve the intended behaviors and how to sustain them. Identified options are prioritized based on their effectiveness, feasibility, relevance and appropriateness within the community’s context.

Step 4: Joint planning
At this planning stage participants will examine the priorities set during the previous step before designing an appropriate plan using the template provided. The plan will include the following elements:

- What will be done.
- When it will be done.
- Who will do what, also indicating what local partners are doing
- Measures or indicators of success.
- Participatory tools for monitoring and evaluating actions.
